(i) Anticoagulant

An anticoagulant is a substance that prevents blood from clotting or reduces the likelihood of blood clot formation. Blood clotting is a natural process that helps prevent excessive bleeding when a blood vessel is injured. However, in some medical conditions, excessive blood clotting can occur, leading to serious health issues such as deep vein thrombosis, stroke, or pulmonary embolism. Anticoagulants are used to treat and prevent these conditions.

Anticoagulants work by interfering with the blood clotting process, often by inhibiting the action of certain proteins involved in clot formation. This can prevent the formation of harmful blood clots.

There are several types of anticoagulants, including:

Heparin : This is a fast-acting anticoagulant often used in hospital settings for immediate blood clot prevention. It's given intravenously or subcutaneously. (Caprin 5000 & 25000 IU Inj) and more Brands available in our Website.

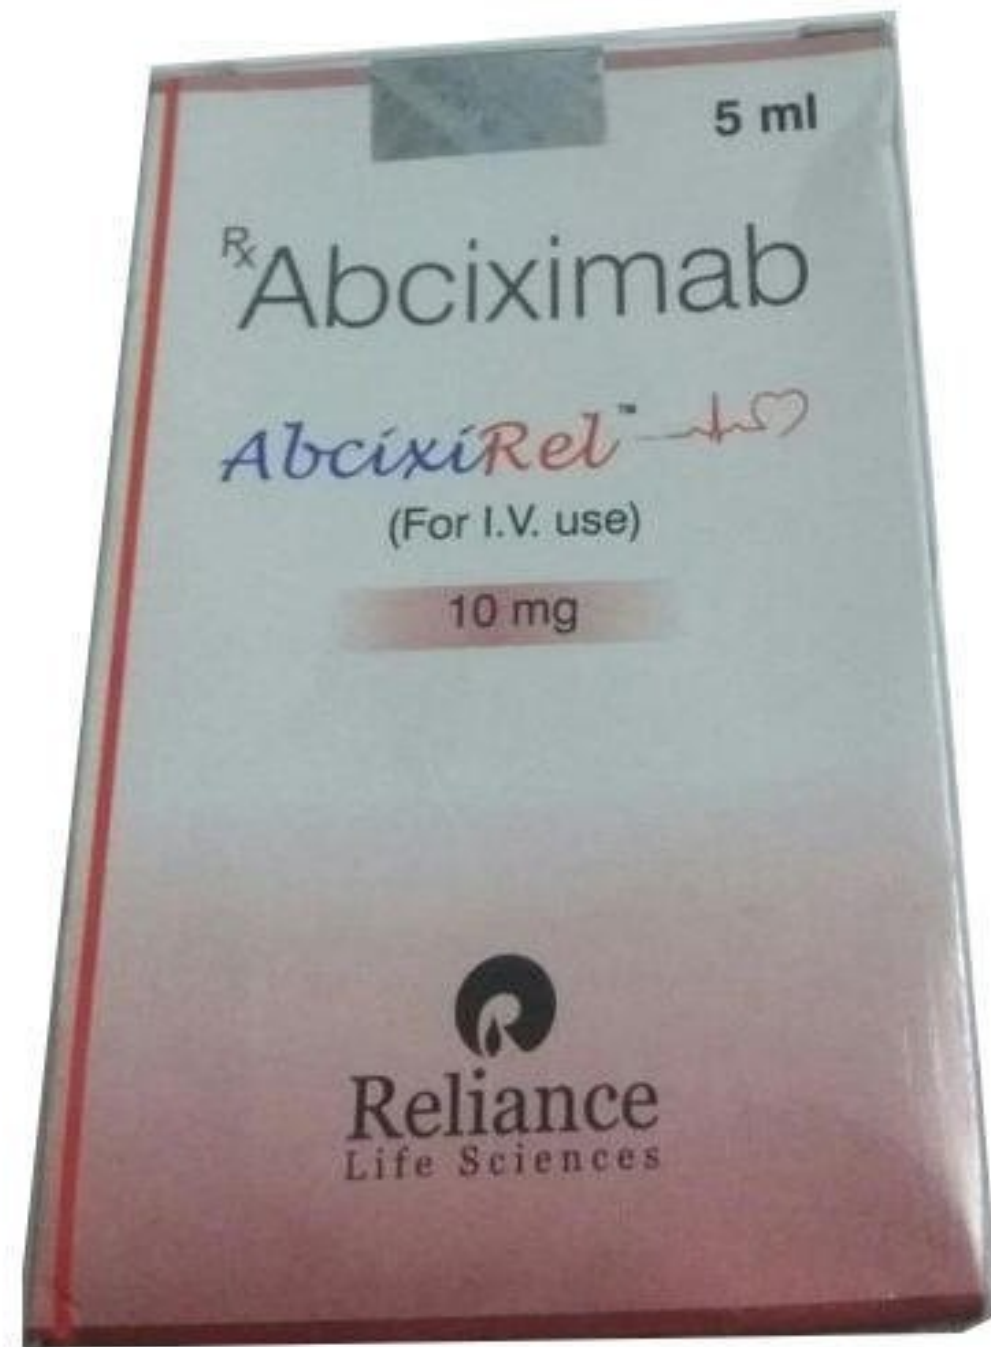

Warfarin (Coumadin) : This is an oral anticoagulant that works by inhibiting the synthesis of certain clotting factors. It requires careful monitoring and adjustment due to interactions with diet and other medications. (Warf 1MG, 2MG ,3 MG, 5MG Tablet) and more Brands available in our Website.

Direct Oral Anticoagulants (DOACs) : These include medications like apixaban, dabigatran, edoxaban, and rivaroxaban. They act directly on specific clotting factors and have more predictable dosing compared to warfarin. (Eliquis / Apigat (2.5MG, 5MG)) and more Brands available in our Website.

Antiplatelet Agents : While not exactly anticoagulants, these medications like aspirin and clopidogrel prevent platelets from clumping together, which also reduces the risk of clot formation. (Deplet & Clopilet (75 & 150MG)) and more Brands available in our Website.

Heparinoids : These are related to heparin and have similar anticoagulant effects. They can be used as an alternative to heparin.

(ii) Osteoporosis

Osteoporosis silently weakens your bones, which can make you more likely to experience a bone fracture (broken bone). You can prevent bone density loss with treatments and exercise. Ask your provider about a bone density test if you're over 65 or have a family history of osteoporosis.

More than 50 million people in the U.S. live with osteoporosis. Osteoporosis is common in people over 50. Experts estimate that half of all people assigned female at birth and 1 in 4 people assigned male at birth over 50 have osteoporosis. Studies have found that 1 in 3 adults over 50 who don't have osteoporosis yet have some degree of reduced bone density (osteopenia). People with osteopenia have early signs of osteoporosis. If it's not treated, osteopenia can become osteoporosis.

the most common medications providers use to treat osteoporosis include hormone therapies like replacement estrogen or testosterone and bisphosphonates. People with severe osteoporosis or a high risk of fractures might need medications, including parathyroid hormone (PTH) analogs, denosumab and romosozumab. These medications are usually given as injections. Buy genuine Osteoporosis medications online at the most affordable price in worldwide from Ametheus Health.com. We offer the best Osteoporosis medications for online to your doorstep with a fast delivery.

(iii) Arthritis

Rheumatoid arthritis (RA) is an autoimmune disease in which the immune system starts attacking healthy cells of the body and causes chronic joint inflammation.

Rheumatoid arthritis affects the joints, such as wrists, hands, and knees, and causes painful swelling. Symptoms include tender and swollen joints and stiff joints which worsen in the morning. The patient experiences fatigue, followed by fever and loss of appetite.

It's still unclear as to what starts off this process. However, genetic factors along with family history, age, obesity, smoking, and an unhealthy lifestyle increase the risk of developing this disease.

Rheumatoid arthritis does not have a permanent cure but early treatment can result in a better prognosis. This disease can be managed with the help of medications and occasionally with surgery as they can slow down the spread of the disease, control its symptoms, and prevent deformity of the joints.

Lifestyle changes, such as being physically active, maintaining a healthy weight, and managing the symptoms through self-care strategies, can help RA patients lead productive lives.

(iv) Steroidal Product

Steroidal medicines, often referred to as corticosteroids or simply steroids, are a class of medications that mimic the effects of natural hormones produced by the adrenal glands, specifically glucocorticoids. These medications are widely used to treat a variety of medical conditions due to their potent anti-inflammatory and immunosuppressive properties. However, it's important to note that these are different from anabolic steroids, which are often used illicitly to enhance athletic performance.

Corticosteroids are available in various forms, including oral tablets, injectables, topical creams/ointments, nasal sprays, inhalers, and more. Some common corticosteroids include like Prednisone, Hydrocortisone, Fluticasone, Dexamethasone, Betamethasone, etc.

Steroidal medications are prescribed to treat a wide range of conditions, including:

Inflammatory Conditions : They are used to reduce inflammation in conditions like arthritis, asthma, inflammatory bowel disease, and dermatitis.

Allergic Reactions : Corticosteroids can help manage symptoms of allergies, such as skin reactions, nasal congestion, and breathing difficulties.

Autoimmune Diseases : Conditions like lupus, multiple sclerosis, and rheumatoid arthritis can be managed with these medications to suppress the immune system's overactivity.

Organ Transplants : Steroids are often part of immunosuppressive regimens for transplant patients to prevent organ rejection.

Skin Disorders: Many skin conditions like eczema, psoriasis, and allergic reactions can be treated with topical corticosteroids.

Skin Disorders : Many skin conditions like eczema, psoriasis, and allergic reactions can be treated with topical corticosteroids.

Respiratory Conditions : Asthma and chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD) symptoms can be alleviated using inhaled corticosteroids.

While corticosteroids can be highly effective in managing various conditions, their use can also lead to potential side effects, especially with prolonged or high-dose use. Some common side effects include increased susceptibility to infections, weight gain, osteoporosis, elevated blood pressure, mood changes, and increased blood sugar levels. Therefore, their use should always be under the guidance and supervision of a healthcare professional.

(v) Vaccinations

Vaccines are medical treatments designed to stimulate the immune system and provide immunity against specific diseases. They usually contain weakened or inactivated forms of the disease-causing microorganisms, or parts of these microorganisms, such as proteins or sugars. When a person is vaccinated, their immune system learns to recognize these components as foreign invaders and produces an immune response, including the production of antibodies.

Vaccines play a crucial role in preventing the spread of infectious diseases and protecting individuals and communities from potentially serious illnesses. They have been instrumental in eradicating or significantly reducing the prevalence of diseases like smallpox, polio, measles, and many others.

In recent times, vaccines have gained significant attention due to the global COVID-19 pandemic caused by the novel coronavirus SARS-CoV-2. Scientists and researchers developed multiple vaccines in record time to combat the virus. These vaccines, like the Pfizer-BioNTech, Moderna, Johnson & Johnson, AstraZeneca, and Sinovac vaccines, have been shown to be effective in preventing severe illness and death from COVID-19.

ANTIVIRAL DRUG

HIV / AIDS

Hepatitis

(i) HIV / AIDS

HIV (Human Immunodeficiency Virus) attacks the immune system of the body and leads to AIDS (Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome). The first signs of HIV infection are flu-like symptoms that are seen within 2 to 4 weeks after getting infected. This is known as primary or acute HIV infection. Some people do not have any symptoms during this phase. It is followed by a latent stage during which the virus multiplies and usually there are no detectable signs and symptoms. Gradually the virus weakens the immune system and progresses to AIDS.

The most common cause of HIV is sexual contact with the infected person. A person can also get infected by blood transfusion, sharing infected needles and syringes contaminated with infected blood. Pregnant women infected with HIV can transmit the virus to the fetus through shared circulation.

Symptoms Of HIV Infection

There are several symptoms of HIV infection which vary from person to person and also as per the stage of the infection. The three stages of HIV infection are:

Stage 1: Acute HIV infection

It is estimated that 50-70% of individuals with HIV infection experience a flu-like illness within 2 to 4 weeks after a primary infection. This is known as primary or acute HIV infection and lasts for weeks. Some people do not have any symptoms during this phase. The symptoms can include: Fever, Chills, Rashes, Headache , Swollen lymph glands, mainly on the neck, Night sweats, Mouth ulcers or genital ulcers, Joint Pain, Fatigue

Stage 2: Clinical latency

In this stage, the virus is getting multiplied, but at a very low level. There are no detectable signs and symptoms in this stage. This stage is called Chronic HIV infection. Although the length of time from initial infection to the development of clinical disease varies greatly, the median time for untreated patients is ~10 years. The rate of ongoing progression is directly correlated with HIV RNA levels. Patients with high levels of HIV RNA in plasma progress to symptomatic disease faster than do patients with low levels of HIV RNA. The transmission of HIV is highest during this stage if viral load is detected in the blood. There is a risk of transmitting HIV to your sexual partner.

Stage 3: AIDS

If a person is having HIV and is not on HIV treatment, gradually the virus will weaken the immune system and progress to AIDS. A diagnosis of AIDS is made in any individual age 6 years and older with HIV infection and a CD4+ T cell count <200 per microliter and in anyone with HIV infection who develops one of the HIV associated diseases considered to be indicative of a severe defect in cell mediated immunity.

Symptoms of AIDS include – Pneumonia, Sores of the mouth and anus, Extreme tiredness, Rapid weight loss, Recurring fever, Memory loss and depression.

Each of these symptoms can lead to another illness. Many of the severe symptoms of HIV are opportunistic infections. These infections come into action when the immune system of the body weakens.

Although the cure for the disease is still under research, some medications at certain stages can prolong the life of HIV-positive patients. These medications include protease inhibitors, fusion inhibitors, multidrug combinations, HIV-positive and reverse transcriptase inhibitors.

VIROCOMB 150 MG/300 MG TABLET

(ii) Hepatitis

Hepatitis is a medical condition characterized by inflammation of the liver. There are several different types of hepatitis, including viral hepatitis, autoimmune hepatitis, and toxic hepatitis. The most common types are viral hepatitis, which is caused by various viruses that specifically affect the liver.

Viral hepatitis is classified into several types:

Hepatitis A (HAV) : This type is usually transmitted through contaminated food or water. It's often a short-term illness and doesn't lead to chronic liver disease.

Hepatitis B (HBV) : Hepatitis B is spread through contact with the blood or other body fluids of an infected person. It can be acute (short-term) or chronic (long-term), and chronic HBV infections can lead to severe liver complications.

Hepatitis C (HCV) : Hepatitis C is primarily spread through blood-to-blood contact, often through sharing needles or other drug paraphernalia. Like HBV, it can also become chronic and lead to liver damage over time.

Hepatitis D and E are rarely have often with limited treatment options.

Common symptoms of hepatitis can include fatigue, jaundice (yellowing of the skin and eyes), abdominal pain, nausea, vomiting, and dark urine. However, the severity and presentation of symptoms can vary depending on the type of hepatitis and the individual's health status.

Preventive measures for hepatitis include vaccination (available for hepatitis A and B), practicing good hygiene, avoiding high-risk behaviors such as sharing needles or engaging in unprotected sex, and being cautious about the sources of food and water when traveling to regions with poor sanitation.

It's important to note that chronic hepatitis, especially hepatitis B and C, can lead to serious complications such as cirrhosis (scarring of the liver) and even liver cancer. Early detection and appropriate medical management are crucial in preventing these complications.
