(VI)-BACTERIAL VAGINOSIS -

Bacterial vaginosis is a type of vaginal infection caused by an imbalance of bacteria in the vagina. Normally, the vagina contains a balance of various bacteria, including beneficial Lactobacillus species, which help keep other harmful bacteria in check. However, when there is an overgrowth of certain bacteria, particularly Gardnerella vaginalis, it can lead to BV.

Bacterial vaginosis (BV) is a common vaginal infection. It happens when there is an imbalance of the natural vaginal bacteria. Bacterial vaginosis is typically treated with antibiotics, such as metronidazole or clindamycin. These can be administered orally or vaginally, depending on the severity of the infection. It's essential to complete the full course of antibiotics as prescribed by the healthcare provider.

ix- Cystitis

Cystitis is a common urinary tract infection (UTI) affecting women, with approximately half of women experiencing the condition at least once. It occurs when bacteria enter the urethra, reach the bladder and start to multiply, and is most common among those who are sexually active or are pregnant.

The symptoms usually include pain while urinating, needing to urinate more often, lower abdominal pain and dark, cloudy or strong-smelling urine. Thankfully, popular treatment can quickly relieve the irritation and the infection can usually be flushed out by drinking plenty of water.

The most common type of urinary tract infection (UTI), which is characterised by the inflammation and pain of the bladder. Symptoms for this condition include a swollen bladder, pungent and dark urine, abdominal pain, and ou can get cystitis when harmless bacteria that normally live in the bowel or skin finds a way into the urine through the urethra (tube from where the urine is excreted). This can happen due to: Having sex, Inserting a tampon, Wiping your bottom back to front, Inserting a catheter, Using a diaphragm for contraception. Cystitis is more common in women as their urethra is shorter and closer to their anus, so it easier for the bacteria to get into the bladder.
